MEDIA ALERT

The International Negative Pressure Wound Therapy Expert Panel to announce results of inaugural symposium in Hamburg

The International Negative Pressure Wound Therapy (NPWT) Expert Panel will be hosting a global teleconference that will:

- Detail the launch of the panel and its purpose;
- Reveal the results from its symposium in Hamburg being held February 5-6, 2010, where clinicians from around the globe will convene to develop a comprehensive, evidence-based consensus on the use of NPWT;
- Outline the ongoing consensus-building process open to all qualified clinicians via www.npwtexperts.com that will ultimately result in a final consensus document by early 2011.

Additional Background

There is an important need for evidence-based recommendations in NPWT because clinicians have now more technical options than ever before, and healthcare providers in many countries are reviewing the evidence base of this important therapeutic option. Evidence-based consensus in NPWT can help establish best practices, create consistency and promote collaboration among clinicians.
